ABOUT

Christopher graduated from UC Davis with a major in Political Science, with a minor in History. After college, Christopher attended University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law.

Prior to working for Hanna Brophy, Christopher worked for a statewide workers' compensation defense law firm working throughout California. Most recently, Christopher worked for a local San Diego workers' compensation defense firm. Christopher has appeared at many of the WCAB district offices in the State throughout his career. Christopher's practice focuses on defending self-insured employers in all phases of workers' compensation litigation. Christopher believes in the efficient resolution of workers' compensation claims and aims to handle all matters in a cost-effective way.

When he is not defending clients, Christopher enjoys spending time with his wife and two young sons as well as extended family. He loves reading, golfing and following Major League Baseball and the English Premier League.
